STATEWIDE CURRENT SITUATION:

Pursuant to his powers as Governor of the State of Texas, Greg Abbott has issued a proclamation certifying that the severe weather, tornado and flooding incident that began on Monday May 4th, 2015, has caused a disaster in Bosque, Clay, Denton, Eastland, Gaines, Montague and Van Zandt Counties. An updated proclamation added Cooke, Grimes, Hood, Navarro, Smith and Wise Counties on May 15th. State Emergency Management Council have sent state agency and volunteer agency representatives to the SOC to support resource requests. The SOC will be conducting daily severe weather conference calls with the National Weather Service Offices and state agency representatives at 10:00 am (CDT). The SOC decreased its readiness to Level III (Increased Readiness Conditions) at 7:00 am Monday, May 18th.

A frontal boundary remains stationary over southern portions of the state today. Continued upper level disturbances will move through the region and produce the chance for showers and thunderstorms across much of the state, but especially western Texas including the South Plains and into the Trans Pecos.

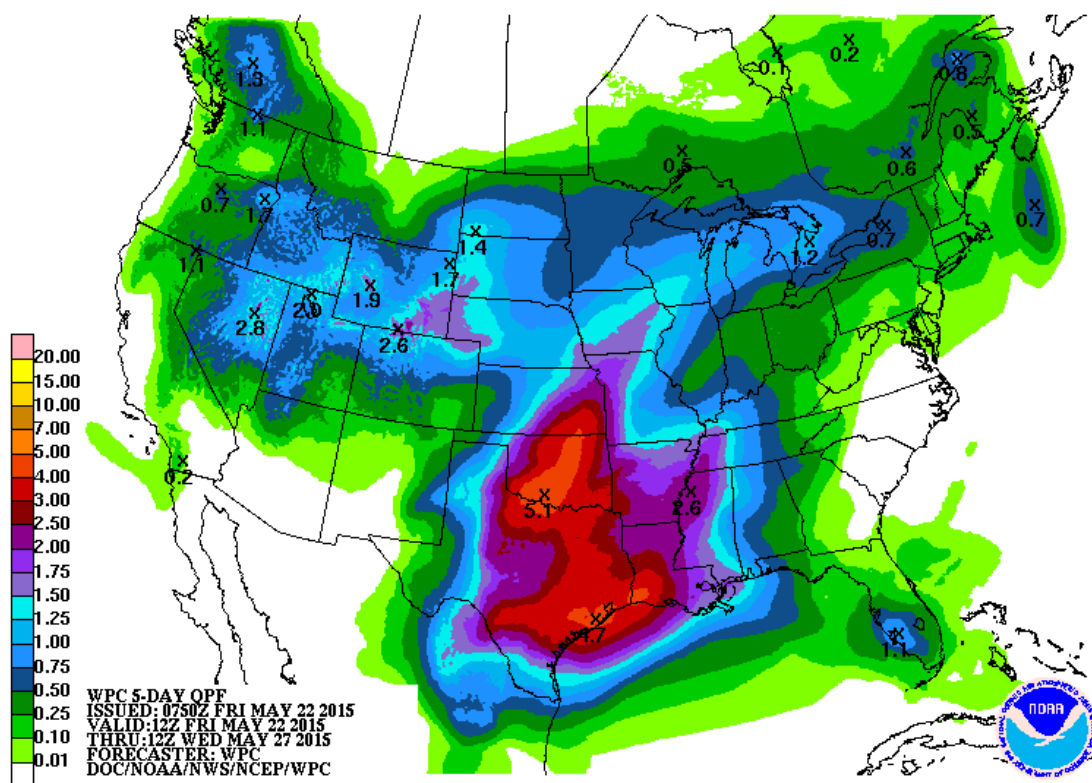

Rainfall is expected to average around one inch or less (with locally higher amounts) across northwest and western portions of the state, but there will be a chance of severe weather (categorized as a slight risk) this afternoon through late tonight from the western Panhandle down through the western South Plains, the Trans Pecos and into the Big Bend. Large hail and damaging winds are the main threats, but isolated tornadoes will be possible, especially during the evening hours.

Even with just 1-2 inches of rainfall today, some areas could see flash flooding due to already saturated grounds. Portions of the Panhandle are under a Flash Flood Watch beginning late tonight.

By Saturday, another event is expected to unfold, with heavy rainfall and severe weather possible from the Red River down through the Rio Grande and across much of central Texas. Flash Flood watches have already been posted for north-central Texas beginning Saturday afternoon.

This rainfall and storms are expected to persist through Saturday night and into Sunday, where the heavier rainfall is expected to be over the eastern third of the state. The severe weather threat will continue as well on Sunday over South and Southwest portions of the state.

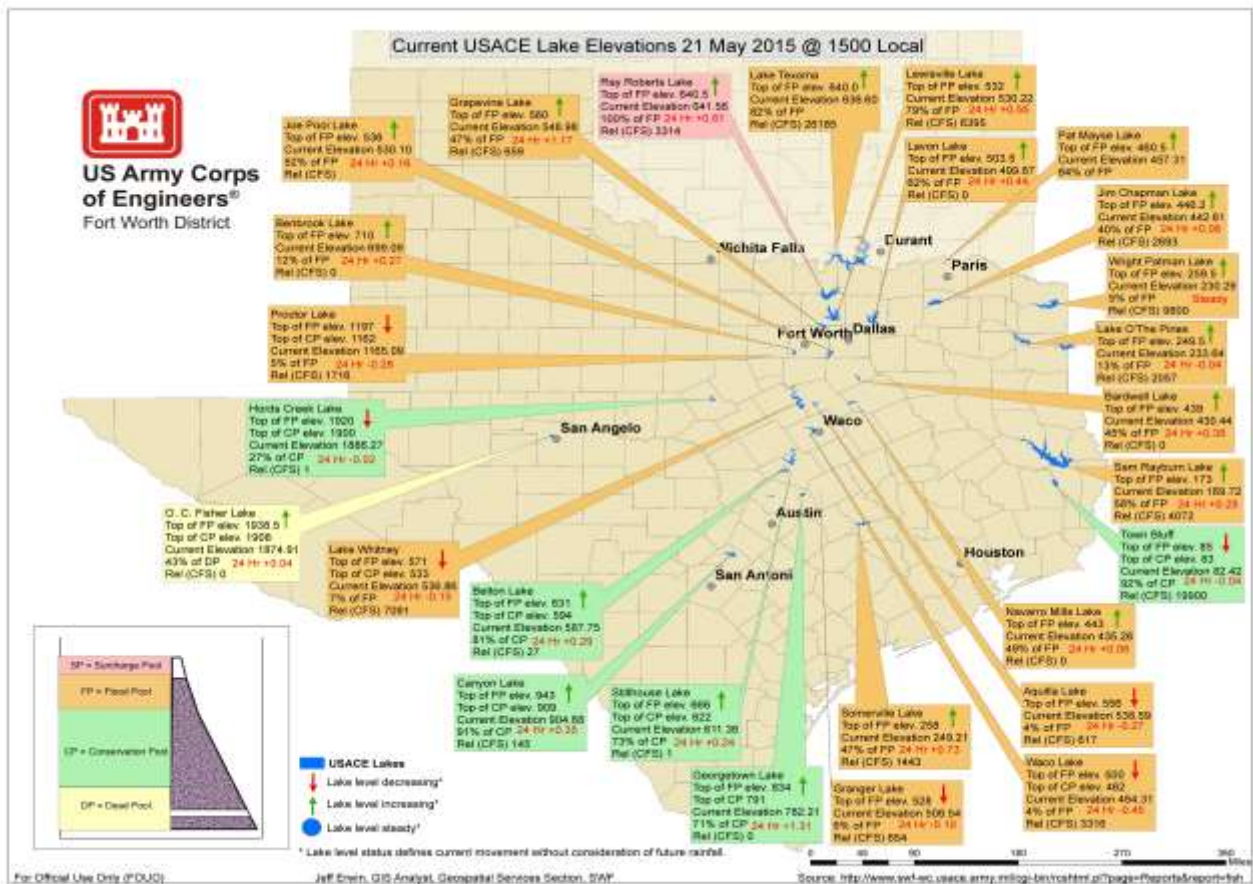

The heavy rainfall threat shifts to coastal Texas Monday into Tuesday, including the Houston area, where another 2-4 inches of rainfall is possible.

5 Day Rainfall Forecast

The West Gulf River Forecast Center (WGRFC) advised that the Sabine, Neches and Trinity Rivers have been in flood stage for 3-4 weeks; no additional impacts other than prolonged rain levels are expected. Several points along the Nueces River are in moderate to major flood stages, and the San Antonio/Goliad Rivers are forecasted to rise to moderate flood stage. Heavy rainfall is expected along the San Jacinto River.

Current Lake Conditions are reported on attached map, no projected concerns with USACE Lakes at this time all are functioning as designed.

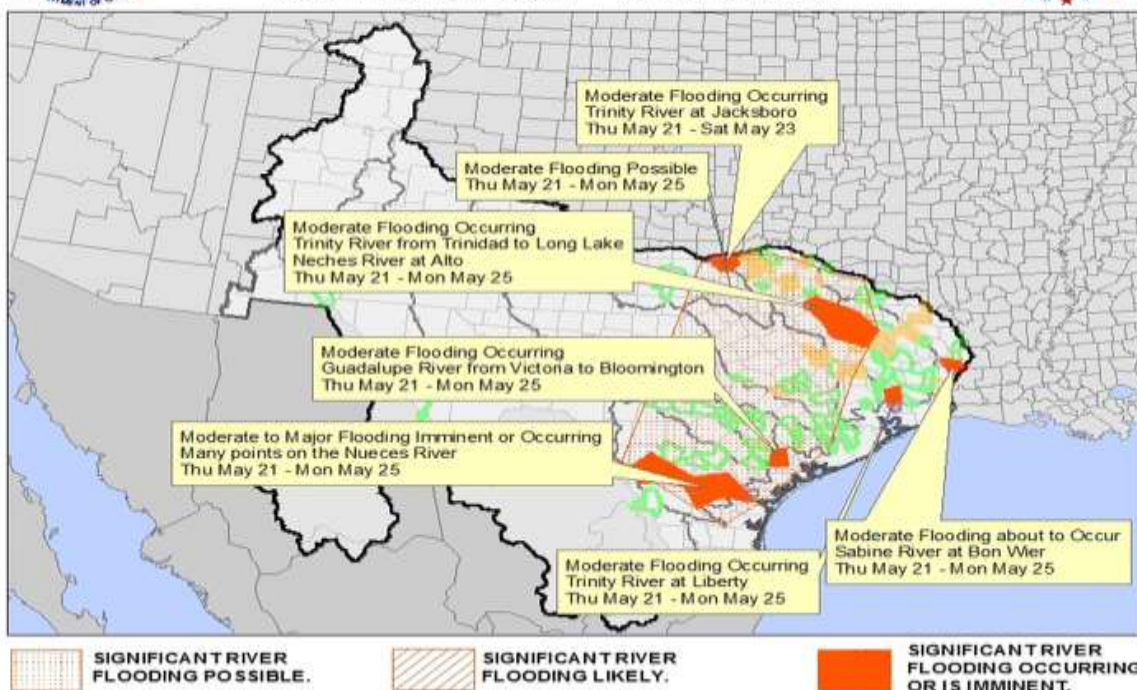

Significant River Flood Outlook

West Gulf River Forecast Center 5/21/2015 12:13:53 PM

National Weather Service (NWS) Fort Worth: Isolated thunderstorms are possible across all of North and Central Texas. Localized heavy rainfall from some of these storms may result in flooding. Lightning strikes will also be a hazard.

NWS Norman: Several rivers and streams remain above flood stage. Additional rain today will cause minor flooding and small rises on some rivers. Thunderstorms are possible over North Texas, but are not expected to be severe.

NWS Austin/San Antonio: Scattered thunderstorms will be possible across all of South Central Texas. Some storms could produce locally heavy rainfall.

NWS Corpus Christi: Isolated to scattered showers and thunderstorms will be possible today. Some storms may be strong and produce locally heavy rains. No widespread severe weather or flash flooding is expected.

NWS Houston/Galveston: Scattered showers and thunderstorms are possible mainly southwest of a Columbus to Houston line along a stalled frontal boundary. Brief heavy downpours with spotty accumulations of 1 to 2 inches with these storms are possible.

NWS Amarillo: Showers and thunderstorms are possible across the Panhandle during the day; heavy rain could lead to some minor nuisance flooding. Thunderstorm chances increase at night, some storms becoming severe with hail up to 2 inches and winds over 60 mph. Heavy rain with these thunderstorms may lead to flooding or flash flooding.

NWS Brownsville: Scattered showers and thunderstorms will develop and move across portions of Deep South Texas. Some of these storms will produce gusty winds and heavy rainfall. Localized flash flooding can be expected where heavy rainfall has fallen over the past week.

Each regional roster is comprised of 50 troopers and 5 sergeants per region.

Local helicopters are available in Austin, Dallas, and San Antonio.

Texas Military Forces and Louisiana Military Forces operations for military forces aircraft (daylight hours only) are 7:00 am-6:30 pm, first shift; and 9:00 am–8:30 pm, second shift.

Texas Military Forces (TXMF): TXMF, in conjunction with TDEM, is developing a fighter management plan in order to reset aircrews prior to the busy holiday weekend. Although this is still developing and has not been approved, the intent is to rotate aircrews through a “down day”, so that the fighter management clock would be reset for all crews by Thursday. Each site would maintain the response capability for each airframe and each MRP mission, but they reduce their capacity to not below 50% over today and Wednesday. On order, divide your MRPs into A teams and B teams, then rotate each of them through a down day, so that all crews have a day off before response activity spikes over the long weekend.

TXDOT has moved the sandbags (Super Sacks) and slings to College Station, where they will be palletized then moved to Grand Prairie and Ellington Field, to stage near the Chinooks. Once a response is required, they will deploy and establish a sandbag filling and sling-load site, close to the impacted area.
